SUNBEAMS.

"I would not live always,
I ask not to stay."

The above lines from an old hymn—and while I never have met the author, I'll bet he was a pessimist. One who never looked for nor saw the beautiful in nature. He never spent a week camping along some beautiful stream to be lulled to sleep by the deep sonorous tones of the bull-frog—never was roused from pleasant dreams by the lusty droning sound of the festive musketeer to see (as did Abou Ben Adhem) an angel writing in a book of gold. No, sir. If he had he could never have written "I would not live always." He would have said "I want to live always." Me? Why, I just want to hang around as long as I can. I find this old planet a right good place to stay. You see I am pretty well acquainted here and can choose my associates, while at the other place I might have to sit on a bench alongside of some one I don't like down here and there would sure be trouble. Who would not want to live always. Huh! Go to thou pessimist. We will have none of thee. This is a world of sunshine—not shadows—of smiles and not tears.

A new car made its appearance on the streets of my home town recently. It is named the "Moon". First I thought it was a full moon. Later I discovered it to be a dry moon for I saw them fillin' it up at the pump. This car is said to glide over the hills as smoothly as the mellow rays of the mighty orb of night from which it took its name. And I'm lookin' (soon) for a revival of a song which was quite a favorite a few years ago entitled "My sweetheart's the man in the Moon."

Some one asked me if I had read "Over the Top" by Empey and I said "No, sir, I read 'over the Top' by myself—all alone."

Hurrah for Hoover.
He's the man.
If we can't eat,
The soldiers can.

We are admonished to use ice as a necessity and not as a luxury. Yes. But it's pretty hard to determine—these hot days—just when a luxury ceases to be a luxury and becomes a necessity.

I notice that a recipe for a "wheatless loaf" is soon to be made public. Said to be a discovery at the experimental kitchen. Now don't beat a hen a peckin'. Why we've done been eatin' wheatless loaves at our house ever since Hoover first spoke to us about it. The recipe we use is very simple. Here it is—1 qt. corn meal, salt as much as you please, water enough to make a good stiff paste, bake on a board in front of a fire. Is it good? No—

I notice that the zoological society of New York has acquired an educated ape, and seem to think it worthy of special mention. Well, by golly, we can go the effete east one better and then some. Out here in the West educated apes are so common that we don't pay any attention to 'em; you won't find all of them at the zoo either.

It looks (at this writin') as if the editors of the country will be compelled to subscribe for each other's papers in order to swap items. Gosh, won't it be fun to have one editor send another a "dun" tellin' him to pay up and to have the other editor write back and say "Aw, what's eatin' yuh; I done paid up and ordered my paper stopped," or "I didn't subscribe for your old sheet anyway." Fun? Well, I giggle to think of it.

Grasshoppers are a serious pest in several counties this year, but they make excellent chicken feed. Cannot someone invent a sort of grasshopper seine which would make the catching of them easy and profitable? Go ahead and make a million out of the idea if you want to—we don't want to be rich ourself.—K. C. Times, July 22, 1918. A seine indeed—why your poor sinn, why a seine? Just turn your chickens loose. I have a bunch of Leghorns that can out-hop, out-jump, out-run and out-fly any grasshopper. Just bring on your hoppers. We don't raise 'em in this section.

I recently spent a day (also some change) in the hustling little city of—ville—I use the word "hustling" because no other word will express the git-up and go of its people. They are also kind and courteous to strangers—at least I found them so—and the wonder to me is that such enterprising folks should have chosen such a location on which to build a city. The only piece of land that I saw in the city limits level enough to stand on safely is the public square—starting at any point from said square you go down hill—standing at any corner of the square if you should drop a nickel and it should roll away from you and you should chase the nickel and if you were only ten years old when you started you would be too old to enjoy what the nickel would buy after you had retrieved it. Hills? Well, yes. But as I may some time again visit this charming little burg to enjoy the novelty of coasting down its hills, I shall refrain from speaking of any other impressions.

When I was a boy—(Gee, I think I hear some of you say, "What a memory he must have!")—when folks went to meetin' the men would sit on one side of the house and the women on the other. By the time I was old enough to take my gal to church it was entirely proper to sit with her. Say, I wish I could tell you of the sensations which chased each other up and down my back the first time I sat in public with my gal, but I just can't. But you can bet that I didn't hear much of the sermon. O, dear, no. Nowadays it's quite the thing for some folks to ride around with a dog for a seat mate and derved if I don't believe the dog feels about as much out of place as I did.

Mother, may I go out and swim? Nay, nay, Pauline, my daughter; To do your bit—the war to win, You mustn't waste the water.

A WORD WITH WOMEN

Valuable Advice for Butler Readers.

Many a woman endures with noble patience the daily misery of back-ache, pains about the hips, blue, nervous spells, dizziness and urinary disorders, hopeless of relief because she doesn't know what is the matter. It is not true that every pain in the back or hips is trouble "peculiar to the sex." Often when the kidneys get congested and inflamed, such aches and pains follow.

Then help the weakened kidneys. Don't expect them to get well alone. Doan's Kidney Pills have won the praise of thousands of women. They are endorsed at home—Read this Butler woman's convincing statement:

Susan Cowley, W. Ohio St., says: "I had a dull, heavy ache across my back. When getting up or down or lifting anything, a sharp pain went through my back. My health was generally affected, causing me to feel tired, wornout and nervous. Doan's Kidney Pills relieved that trouble."

Price 60c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Susan Cowley had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfgs., Buffalo, N. Y.
